- Egypt's GDP grew 5.3 percent in the 2009/2010 fiscal year and economists predict it will maintain this growth rate through the next two years.
- Besides Qatar, this is a faster growth rate than any other Arab state, and is likely to be faster than Turkey and Israel.
- Egypt's economy was not significantly affected by the global downturn last year as a result of five years of tariff cuts, the sale of many state companies, the liberalization of investment regulations and other reforms initiated by the government.
